Nyta kaikki NEWBERRY - Newbury Academy at the beginning of the school yearContinue regular classes five days a week. Other schools limit classroom time or offer alternatives to learning, but the Academy feels they are in a good place to provide standard learning. The small class size of the Newbury Academy put us in a unique position that it can provide social withdrawal of more than six feet in every classroom, said head of school Nicole May. We were able to achieve this by limiting the size of the class to 12, splitting the class, and reusing a large room as a classroom. The safety of our students and staff is of the safety of our students and staff, and we have worked hard to create a comprehensive return to school planning, including CDC and SCDHEC recommendations. May continued to say that most families and teachers at the Newbury Academy wanted students to return to the classroom five days a week for direct learning. Regarding the alternatives to a direct learning plan, see At this time, we cannot provide full-time virtual learning to individual students. Not only do we expect our teachers to teach in the classroom, but it would be unfair and unrealistic to provide quality virtual learning at the same time. But if you need to close it at any time in the future, you're ready to move to virtual learning, and your teachers are ready to provide students with fun and interactive lessons. Of course, teachers always provide work for students who need quarantine or are out with illness and work individually with them to make sure they get caught up in the job, she said. In the relevant memo, if COVID-19 becomes a problem at the Academy, May ensures that the school takes into account SCDHEC and CDC guidance to facilitate the best possible results for students, faculty and their families. Of course, learning in the classroom is one thing, but activities such as chorus and other close activities had to be changed to meet the recommendations of social unansoring. The Newbury Academy has changed these programs as well. For example, agriculture is replacing the chorus as an activity this semester. May also explained that apart from the confines of regular classrooms, she has built an outdoor learning area where class guidance can occur. Much focus is also given to football and other autumn sports schedules that have been changed or cancelled elsewhere. As the Academy heading into 2020-21, now the plan: We are closely following the SCISA guidelines for sports, including a range of additional safety measures. At the moment, we are on track to provide most of our normal sports, May said. Andy Husk at 803-276-0625 ext. Reach 1863 @TheNBOnews Twitter.
